I Want Unique Candle Sconces For My Home

Candle sconces are an elegant way to have candles displayed on the walls of your home. If you use an interior decorator for any room, chances are he/she will recommend the use of sconces to hold the candles on the wall. Candle sconces can be made of wrought iron or you can have a brass sconce with a hurricane lamp. The plate of the candle sconces that screws to the wall can be made of metal, plastic or brass.

The plate of a candle sconce holds the candleholder or if you have tapered candles, you can have candles sconces that hold candelabras. There are a variety of styles available in wall sconces for candles and when you light the candles in them, they give the room a warm, inviting glow. Although you can use just about any kind of candles in sconces- votive, tealight, pillar or taper – your best bet is a dripleless candle. Those made from paraffin or beeswax are best if you don't want to spend time peeling candle wax off the floors and walls.

A brass wall candle sconce with a hurricane lamp holds a candle inside an old-fashioned lamp. This type of candle sconce will help you feel that your home is a cozy and safe haven, reminiscent of the days of the pioneers. On cold winter nights when the wind is whistling outside, you can relax with the glow of the candle reflecting off the wall. When you lose the power, you will still have light and you can feel safe with these candle sconces. The hurricane lamp style of sconce keeps the flame of the candle away from the wall and there is no danger of the candle tipping over.

Candle sconces come in a wide array of styles – gothic, traditional, art-deco and Victorian. You can choose a different set of wall sconces for each room and of course, you have to have a candle sconce along the wall of the stairway. This sets off the décor of the home. Although you may prefer the look of the brass wall candle sconce with hurricane for the entire house, you can choose different colors and scents to reflect your individual personality.

Traditional candle sconces were made from wrought iron and contained glass hurricane lamps. In addition to brass wall candle sconces, you can also have them made from Tiffany glass or plastic or you may prefer to have crystals dripping from them so that they look like mini chandeliers. You can also use imitation electric candles that operate on batteries if you don't like the idea of using wax candles close to the wall.

Enjoy The Convenience of Scented Jar Candles – Inexpensive And Useful

The convenience of scented jar candles cannot be underestimated. The candle is enclosed in the jar so you don't have to worry about wax dripping onto the table or your clothing. In addition, with a scented jar candle you don't have to bother with buying a candleholder because the jar serves this purpose. Scented jar candles come in all scents and colors allowing you to color coordinate every room of your home. They are inexpensive and the perfect ways to get the aromatherapy candles that you want. The various scents serve different aromatherapy needs and with scented jar candles you can have one each for every need that you have.

You can buy inexpensive scented jar candles just about anywhere. However, the problem that you have with buying scented jar candles at the store is that it is impossible for one store to have all the different colors and scents. Therefore, the easiest way to get the specific scented jar candle is to search online for candle retailers and there are many of them to look through. You can even order your custom made aromatherapy jar candle in a specific color and scent and you will save money by ordering this way.

For aromatherapy, a jar candle offers you a wealth of different healing scents. Relax in the aroma of Patchouli that helps to calm frayed nerves at the end of the day. Other scented jar candles that will help you relax include lavender, jasmine, Ylang Ylang and geranium. If you want to have inexpensive scented jar candles to give you energy, aromatherapy scents that are beneficial include peppermint, basil, eucalyptus and rosemary. The scent from burning aromatherapy jar candles can also help you with indigestion.

Just burn a scented jar candle with one of these scents to see how it can help you: Patchouli, Camphor, Eucalyptus or Lavender.

There are also healing properties from aromatherapy jar candles that will help ease your headache. Scented jar candles in fragrances such as peppermint, cedar and marjoram are good for headaches. You can even get inexpensive scented jar candles with properties that help you lose weight and with your love life. Choose a specific scented jar candle to include in a gift basket or buy a basket of several jar candles with all the same scent or a variety. This kind of gift is perfect for any occasion and for either male or female.

Scented jar candles are also easy to make at home. All you have to do is melt the wax, add the wick, color and scent and pour it into jars to set. When the candle burns out, the jars are great as holders for small objects that you need to keep. It is not advisable to reuse most jars to make more scented jar candles because the heat from burning the candle may weaken the glass.

Butterfly candle holders are easy to make and a great gift idea. The materials are very inexpensive, and you can use your imagination for a variety of designs. To get started, you will need:

Materials:

Small glass candle holders Butterfly wrapping paper Yellow tissue paper Decoupage Cuticle scissors Small paintbrush Damp paper towel

You can buy whatever glass candle holders you like (or use some you already have laying around). I bought mine at Walmart for about $0.59. You could also find them at thrift stores or yard sales.

I chose butterflies for my design, but you could choose whatever design you'd like—maybe keeping in mind the tastes of the person you're making them for. You can cut out pictures from anywhere, including calendars, greeting cards, magazines. Thin paper decoupages best.

After you have some pictures in mind, use cuticle scissors (the kind you cut your fingernails with) to cut out the pictures. These scissors work best on small pictures and cut rounder corners than regular scissors. If you're not going to use the pictures right away, store them in ziploc bags.

You can buy decoupage at any craft store. It is normally found with the glue. It allows you to permanently affix a picture to another object, giving the object an overall glossy effect. Make sure the glass you're working with is clean. Tear a piece of tissue paper into small (approx. 1 inch) pieces. Using the paint brush, brush some decoupage on to the back of one of the pieces of tissue paper. Position the tissue paper on the glass and then brush some more decoupage on top of it. Continue gluing on pieces of tissue paper, overlapping at the edges, until the entire candle holder is covered (including the bottom—set the candle holder on its top to dry). Brush one last coat of decoupage over the entire candle holder. Use damp paper towel to wipe off any excess decoupage.

After the decoupage has dried for about an hour (or more), position the butterflies (or other pictures) on top of the tissue paper. First brush some decoupage on the backs of the pictures and place them on the glass. Brush another coat of decoupage over the entire glass and set the candle holder on its top to dry again. After the decoupage has dried, add 2 or 3 more coats of decoupage after each coat has dried.

That's it! These candle holders are only limited by your imagination. Use different colors of tissue paper and a variety of pictures for different themes. You could make these with holiday themes, like for Christmas or Easter. They also make great birthday presents, hostess gifts, or party favors. They are very easy to make and you can make several of them at one time.

How To Make A Sea Glass Candle

We love candle making! We met Tommy Yaley at the Craft and Hobby Show. He and his family own and run Yaley Enterprises, makers of all kinds of candle making supplies. When we told Tommy that we wanted to do a video course in how to make candles, he helped us so much! He answered our questions and shared all his best tips and tricks. He also shared all kinds of candle making supplies! So as a big thank you to him and Yaley, we made this video showing how to use Yaley's two-part mold to make an embedded candle. Thanks again Tommy!

We love the look of an embedded candle. We've seen beautiful ones at Pottery Barn and Pier One using shells, flowers, and even starlight peppermints. These candles make such lovely gifts and they are even more wonderful when handmade by you! This is a fun candle to make and we'll show you how!

This candle requires a two-part mold. The inner mold makes a core candle. This is the candle that will actually melt when you burn this candle. After you make the inner candle, you set it inside the outer mold and add the embedments, then the wax. This keeps all the shells or sea glass or mints away from the burning center of the candle. And also keeps these items on the outside of the candle where you can see them!

To wick the inner core mold, start by covering the top edge of the mold with small pieces of masking tape. Feed the wicking through the hole at bottom of mold leaving about one inch of wick. Coil the end of the wick. Roll the mold sealer into a ball and press it over the coiled wick to seal the bottom of the mold. Tie other end of the wick to a pencil and prop it across the top of the mold. Trim off excess wicking.

It is important that the wick is centered from top to bottom so you can safely burn your candle. It is also important to choose the right size wick for your candle. To determine the size of the wick for your candle, measure the diameter of your inner core mold. Then match that diameter with the wick packaging. The size of a wick refers to the diameter of the wick itself and how wide it will burn. It is important to choose a wick that will not burn too wide as you don't want the burning part of the candle to reach the embedments.

Once you have your inner core candle made, you can set it inside the outer mold and add the embedments and more wax. In this video, we will show you an extra trick to expose more of your embedments once the whole candle is unmolded. We use a heat gun to melt away a small amount of the wax. this lets more of the sea glass in our candle show. It works like a charm!
